Think about the people Pastor Paul Dean mentioned in his sermon: Abraham. Sarah. Moses. Sampson. Samuel. John the Baptist. Mary. What do you think hope looked like to them? What did they fear? What do you think kept them going through the vast dry spaces in their lives?

What are the dry spaces in your life? The fears? Do you think it’s possible to find hope there? Why, or why not? What do words like “victory” or “living water” or “resurrection” look like in your situation?

Does it sometimes feel risky to show up in this world daring to hope for anything at all? Is there anything you can do about that? Can you be the hope that someone else needs, even while you’re desperate for hope in your own life? Does the world work that way? Does God work that way? Why, or why not? How have you seen God’s presence in troubled times?
